

I think that kids should keep their halloween candy, because the parents got to have a chance when they were kids so we should get our chance too. Ask your parents if their parents if took their candy when they were kids. Your parents have a job so they can buy their own candy with their own money. We have to remember to be polite at dozens of houses while our parents chat with their friends on the sidewalk.

Another reason that kids should keep their halloween candy is because it is yummy and we only get it once a year and we should get to enjoy it. Grown ups have fillings and the sticky candy can pull them out. For example Bit-o-honey and tootsie rolls are very sticky.

Grown ups might get more cavities in their permanent teeth, while kids still have baby teeth to lose. Grown ups don't get recess and P.E. like kids do, so they might not burn off the sugar as fast. So, if they eat too much candy they could gain a pound or two.

This is my argument for parents to not eat their kids halloween candy. But, they are welcome to all the apples in the bag.
